Cortez X. Trotter was named to the position of executive director of the Chicago Office of Emergency Management and Communications by Mayor Richard M. Daley in June, 2001. In this capacity, Mr. Trotter oversees the handling of approximately five million 911 calls annually, which results in over two million emergency dispatches of police, fire, and EMS resources. In addition, Mr. Trotter coordinates the city's multi-agency planning for emergency preparedness serving as the city's point of contact with the federal Office of Homeland Security, as well as the federal and state emergency management agencies, the Red Cross, Salvation Army and similar agencies. He sets priorities on the city's requests for federal funding for preparedness measures, and recommends new security procedures that might involve several city departments. He is a twenty-five year veteran of the Chicago Fire Department. As First Deputy Fire Commissioner, he was responsible for the day-to-day administrative and operational oversight of the fire department, overseeing a budget of $300 million and a workforce of 5,000.

Dennis J. FitzSimons was named president and chief operating officer of the Tribune Company in July, 2001. He was previously elected to the Tribune board of directors in May, 2000. Mr. FitzSimons had been appointed executive vice president for the Tribune, responsible for the company's broadcasting, publishing and interactive groups, as well as the Chicago Cubs, in January 2000. He retained the title of president of the Tribune Broadcasting Company, which he had since 1994. A native of New York, Mr. FitzSimons holds a bachelor's degree from Fordham University. He serves as chairman of the Media Scrutiny and Reliability Council for the FCC and is a director of the Newspaper Association of America and the Television Operators Caucus. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees of Northwestern University, the Board of Visitors of the Medill School of Journalism, and a board member of Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry.

Newton N. Minow has been a partner with the law firm of Sidley Austin Brown & Wood since 1965. Prior to this, he was executive vice president, general counsel and director of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc.; chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, by appointment of President John F. Kennedy; and associate counsel to Governor Adlai E. Stevenson. After receiving his B.S. and J.D. degrees from Northwestern University, Mr. Minow served as a law clerk to Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of the U.S. Supreme Court. He has also served as chairman and a trustee of the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS); chairman and a trustee of the Chicago Educational Television Association; visiting fellow with the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University; and as the Annenberg Professor of Communications Law and Policy at Northwestern University. Mr. Minow has received eleven honorary doctorates from institutions of higher learning including University of Notre Dame, Northwestern University, and Brandeis University.

Alicia M. Berg joined the City of Chicago Department of Planning in 1990 and was appointed its commissioner by Mayor Richard M. Daley in January, 2001. As the city's top planning and economic development official, Ms. Berg oversees downtown and neighborhood development activities, including industrial attraction and retention, retail development, business assistance, development finance, open space planning, brownfield redevelopment, design review, historic preservation and zoning. Previously, she was a deputy commissioner in charge of planning for Chicago's central district. Ms. Berg managed a team that worked to ensure the quality and consistency of department efforts involving urban design, tax increment financing, and the acquisition and sale of city-owned property. She graduated with highest honors from Tufts University and holds a M.S. degree in urban and regional planning from the University of Wisconsin at Madison. She is a member of the American Planning Association and the American Institute of Certified Planners

T. Gunny Harboe, AIA, is vice president of the Preservation Group at the architectural firm of MCCLIER. In this role, he is responsible for all projects involving preservation, restoration, or rehabilitation of older structures of historic or architectural significance. Among the projects that he has worked on include the Reliance Building, Rookery Building, Marquette Building, Blackstone Hotel, the Unity Temple in Oak Park, and the Chicago Bee Building. In 2001, Mr. Harboe received the Young Architect Award from the American Institute of Architects, and in 1999, he was recognized by the Chicago Tribune as a Chicagoan of the Year. He holds a B.A. in history from Brown University, a M.S. in historic preservation from Columbia University, and a masters of architecture from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, AIA Chicago, Landmark Preservation Council of Illinois, and was chairman of the AIA Chicago Historic Resources Committee from 1991 to 1994.

Allen R. Sanderson is associate chairman and a senior lecturer in the University of Chicago Department of Economics and a senior research scientist at the National Opinion Research Center (NORC). Recent professional publications include research on the economics of sports stadiums, free agency in sports, and labor markets in professional sports. His contributions at NORC include research on higher education, labor markets, substance abuse, and affirmative action for the National Science Foundation, U.S. News and World Report, and the U.S. Department of Education and the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Mr. Sanderson is an oft-cited authority on sports economics issues and a frequent guest on national and Chicago-area television and radio programs. In 1984, he addressed the Know Your Chicago Symposium on "The Economics of Baseball." He holds degrees from Brigham Young University and the University of Chicago and has taught at Princeton University and the College of William and Mary.
