Robin B. Foster is a Conservation Ecologist with environmental and conservation programs at the Field Museum. He is active in programs to preserve biological diversity and threatened habitats in the tropics, especially in Central and South America. Dr. Foster has a long history of research and exploration in Latin America, focusing on tropical forest ecology and geography; plant community composition and dynamics; floristics; and reproductive biology of plants. As part of the Field Museum's tropical Rapid Biological Inventory teams, he uses the information on ecological and floristic patterns to recommend conservation priorities. The lack of resources for identifying plants in the tropics has been a bottleneck for all researchers and students, and a barrier to public interest for a long time. It has provoked Mr. Foster to develop a variety of new tools to speed up the identification and learning process, such as the Rapid Reference Collection and Rapid Color Guides, while taking advantage of digital technology and the vast resource of tropical collections in the herbarium of the Field Museum. He received a B.A. in biology from Dartmouth College and received a Ph.D. in botany/plant ecology from Duke University in 1974. He also has been an assistant professor of biology at the University of Chicago, a senior ecologist at Conservation International, and a staff biologist at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute.

John M. Leonard, M.D., is the Vice President of Global Medical and Scientific Affairs at Abbott Laboratories. He has fulfilled a number of roles at Abbott since joining the company in 1992 in the areas of pharmaceutical development and pharmaceutical ventures. Previous to Abbott, he was a director of clinical research at G. H. Besselaar Associates. Dr. Leonard's research has resulted in the development of seven drug filings including Omnicef, an extended spectrum cephalosporin antibiotic that fights bacteria in the body; Humira, a rheumatoid arthritis treatment that helps relieve pain and other symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis; and Kaletra, a protease inhibitor for adults and children greater than six months of age with HIV. He has received multiple recognitions including the "Inventor of the Year" award from the Intellectual Property Law Association of Chicago (2004), the "Bronze Award" of the National Health Information Award for Questions and Answers on AIDS, and "The Best of What's New Grand Award" of Popular Science magazine. He is a member of the University of Michigan Medical School Industry Advisory Board and the American Society of Clinical Oncology. Dr. Leonard received a B.A. with Honors in Biochemistry from the University of Wisconsin and a M.D. from Johns Hopkins University.

Rebecca Maniglia has provided training and technical assistance related to issues of female offenders, juvenile justice, and restorative justice to over forty-five states, working with state agencies, private justice programs, and local prevention entities, including schools, to improve services for youth. She also has provided training and/or curricula development for the National Institute of Corrections, the American Correctional Association, the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP), the National Juvenile Detention Association, the American Probation and Parole Association, and the Coalition for Juvenile Justice on topics related to juvenile and delinquency prevention. Ms. Maniglia is currently the director of RLM Associates, a private consulting firm providing assistance related to female offenders and juvenile justice issues. Previously she served as regional manager and project director for the Colorado Office of Community Research Associates, a technical assistance provider for OJJDP. In this capacity, she was responsible for management of the regional office project directors as well as management of OJJDP's gender-specific program initiative administered by the State Relations and Assistance Division. Ms. Maniglia is the author of several publications, including OJJDP's female offender Status of the States Report. She is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Illinois at Chicago where her thesis will focus on female-responsive programming.

Michael Mulqueen assumed the leadership of the Greater Chicago Food Depository in September, 1991, immediately upon his retirement as a Brigadier General after thirty years of service in the United States Marine Corps. As Executive Director, Mr. Mulqueen has worked diligently to address the needs of hungry men, women, and children throughout Chicago and Cook County. He has utilized his negotiation and interpersonal skills to create innovative new services such as the fresh produce and delivery programs and to foster public and private partnerships. Under his leadership, the Food Depository has grown to become one of the largest food banks in the United States. He supervises a staff of 100 and a corps of 8,000 volunteers who distributed more than 40 million pounds of food in FY2003-04 to a network of 600 food pantries, shelters, day care centers, senior facilities, and soup kitchens. FBS: Fortune Small Business named Mr. Mulqueen one of the country's "Best Bosses" for small businesses. He was also featured in Fast Company magazine (September 2003) and Time (May 2004). In December, 2004, Chicago magazine named him one of six "Chicagoans of the Year" for his vital contributions to the life and spirit of Chicago. Mr. Mulqueen holds a B.A. in history from Fordham University and a M.S. in guidance and counseling from Troy State University.

Charles Miles is a poet and author, Chief Executive Officer of EarCandy, and art director of the Southside Community Art Center.

Timuel D. Black was born and raised in Chicago—a place he loves to call home. He is a revered and highly respected educator, political activist, community leader, oral historian, and philosopher. After matriculating from Burke Elementary School and DuSable High School in Chicago, Mr. Black enrolled at Roosevelt University where he received his bachelor's degree. Mr. Black also later received a master's degree from the University of Chicago. One of his first jobs involved working as a field representative for the Metropolitan Burial Society. After being drafted into the Army during World War II, he returned to school and became a social worker. He has taught at a variety of high schools as well as colleges and universities. Mr. Black is a pioneer in the independent black political movement and coined the phrase "plantation politics." He has run for public office several times, including campaigns for Chicago's 4th Ward Alderman, State Senator of the 22nd District, and State Representative of the 22nd District. Mr. Black has spent his life furthering the cause of social justice. Mr. Black's recent book, Bridges of Memory: Chicago's First Wave of Great Migration, chronicles black Chicago history from the 1920s to the present and is based on interviews he conducted.

Andrea L. Smith is the president of The SALIENT Group, a Chicago-based, strategic business consulting firm with diverse expertise in marketing, public relations, community relations, special and social issues management and legislative affairs, affordable housing and business development within the corporate, public and private sectors. She is a former assistant commissioner of the City of Chicago Department of Housing, a $300 million city agency working in partnership with local, state, and national government organizations, corporations and businesses, community organizations, and neighborhood residents to revitalize communities, and to develop and preserve affordable housing opportunities for low- and moderate-income working individuals. Ms. Smith's background includes fifteen years of successful experience as a marketing, public relations/communications, legislative affairs and community development specialist, and media consultant. She holds memberships in the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, the Chicago Association of Realtors, and the Dearborn Real Estate Board. Ms. Smith received a B.S. degree from Bradley University.
